

01 / A SMALL, FOCUSED EXPANSION

Same Pip. New tricks.

Two weapons with different jobs.
One partnership worth breaking.

Linked Trouble builds on the original five-fight circuit.
Choose your gear, watch Pip work, and step in when you see an opening.

The original game is still playable in Classic.

A new encounter, not a longer campaign. Actual browser gameplay.

Give each shot a different job.

Classic • One rival

Both original weapons stopped at the first rival. Their main differences were damage and reach.

Close Coil • A cluster

The impact now pulses outward. Nearby rivals take secondary damage, even off the shot line.

Long Barrel • A line

A bolt can hit two aligned rivals. The second takes a weaker hit, even beyond a Coil pulse's reach.

Actual arena crops from separate ordinary-controls runs. No synthetic combat or added impact artwork. Watch the effects in motion.

Find Relay. Break the link.

Before · Buddy protected

Relay reduces damage to Rivet while it lives. The thin link shows who is helping whom.

After · Link broken

Click or tap Relay to focus it first. Its partner loses protection immediately. Pip can also handle the pair on autopilot.

In the recorded Coil route, one ordinary target click starts this change. Gear, targeting and enemy behavior work together without a new button.

More choices. Not more chores.

Five short encounters.

One starter, four gear choices and two repairs. Choosing a reward restores hull. Both weapon directions have completed real browser runs.

Watch or take the wheel.

Move while firing. Pick a target without losing your route. Read the Chief's warning and move sideways. Return to auto whenever you like.

Still a little machine.

Original robot drawings, clear weapon shapes and restrained reactions. Keyboard and touch, pause, reduced motion and optional muted-by-default sound remain.

Same-machine comparison retained the original first fight and checked full wins, losses, repairs, controls and tab pause. It does not establish perfect balance or universal enjoyment.

05 / PLAY BOTH. PICK YOUR BUILD.

A new reason for one more run.

A standalone browser game. No account, cloud AI, analytics or installation.

Play and compare.
